Ivlyland author releases third book

Early August marks the nationwide release of "The Second World War II, Book 3: The New World," the third installment of Ivlyland author Laura Dothe Hellwig's historical war fiction series.

The book tells the continuing story of a band of men and women, who continue to strive to survive in the U.S., a country given a second chance after they defeated Adolf Hitler's Nazi forces, who invaded the U.S. and brought it to its knees.

"Survivors look back and feel eternally grateful to God for sparing their lives during the most heinous manmade conflict of hatred and prejudice..."

In the third installment of this historical fiction, these survivors, who sent the enemies fleeing, see another opportunity to do things right.

Follow the survivors' saga as they try to rebuild and ensure that their knowledge of this violent part of the history of America will not be lost to future generations.

Published by Tate Publishing and Enterprises, the book is available through bookstores and online.
